Students Go Global with God’s Word
Dear friends,

If you’re like me, you look back on your time at Moody with fondness. It’s a time when you may have formed friendships and developed ministry partnerships that still endure.

Knowing that God gave each of us spiritual gifts to use in ministry with the body of Christ, Moody follows this example. Together we prepare students for ministry, produce biblical media content, and pray for God’s continued blessing and direction. Let’s remember to pray for the Class of 2013 as they enter a new chapter in their lives, going wherever God has called them around the world.

This issue features stories about several alumni and students who partner together for the sake of the gospel and for greater spiritual impact. For example, Moody students and leaders served together in global ministries over spring break. Pastor Mark Jobe’s multi-site church includes many alumni and students serving in diverse Chicago locations. And we rejoice that hundreds of alumni attended Founder’s Week, including several members of one extended family who celebrated an unexpected reunion! For more on that story, see page 15.

We’re so thankful for your partnership with Moody.

Serving Christ together,

Nancy (Andersen ’80) Hastings
Executive Director, Moody Alumni Association

P.S. Save the date now and plan to join other Moody alumni and friends for Moody’s Israel trip, June 11–22, 2014. See page 19 for details.

Moody Highlights

Moody Bible Institute held a special President’s chapel on January 29 to remember the life of freshman Micah Stinchfield. He died on Saturday, January 26, in a swimming pool-related accident at the Solheim Center, the athletic facility on Moody’s Chicago campus. Moody students and employees as well as Micah’s parents, Scott and Leslie Stinchfield, and his siblings were comforted during the chapel service, which included a message by Moody president Paul Nyquist and special music by the Moody Symphonic Band and other groups.

“This loss of the life of a gifted student whose desire was to serve the Lord comes as a shock to all of us,” says Dr. Nyquist. “Our hearts deeply grieve with the Stinchfield family and those who knew and loved Micah. We call upon our God to bring comfort to this family and to our community as we grapple with such a devastating loss.”

Micah, who was nearly 19, was working toward a degree in music, majoring in violin performance, and had recently completed a brief winter concert tour with the Moody Symphonic Band.

“Micah Stinchfield was an exceptional musician,” says Dr. David Gauger, director of the Moody Symphonic Band. “Although only here for one semester, he had an extraordinary impact on the Symphonic Band and music department. He had a heart for ministry and was always making music—if not with his violin, then on the piano or even the recorder, usually with a healthy dose of laughter. The beauty of his music, his love for people, the excellence of his character, and his bright smile will be greatly missed.”

A student who had accompanied Micah on tour testified about his friend during chapel: “He was one of the kindest, most genuine people I’ve ever known.”

More than 30 Moody students were able to travel to Grand Rapids, Minnesota, for Micah’s funeral on February 2, thanks to an outpouring of funds provided by the community in Micah’s hometown. Those students, in turn, ministered to the community with heartfelt thanks.

Distinguished Service Award: Stephen and Phyllis Weiandt

A Distinguished Service Award was presented to Stephen and Phyllis (Peters ’59) Weiandt by Nancy (Andersen ’80) Hastings, Benjamin Chelladurai ’02, and Jayanthi Benjamin ’02 in the morning service of the Howardsville Gospel Church in Marcellus, Michigan, on November 25, 2012.

The Weiandts served in a variety of ministries during their 40 years of missionary service in Africa, including establishing and overseeing an aviation program, working as Field Director of Africa Evangelical Fellowship for Zambia, and serving as pioneer missionaries on a one-man station in the African bush.

Founder’s Week 2013 Spiritually Enriches Thousands

More than 23,000 Moody alumni, students, and friends were spiritually refreshed and challenged by the biblical teaching and corporate worship at Moody Bible Institute’s 112th annual Founder’s Week in Chicago on February 4–8. More than 63,000 people from 70 countries viewed the conference online.

Respected Bible teachers and preachers, including Tony Evans, James Ford ’84, Mark Jobe ’84, Erwin Lutzer, John MacArthur, James MacDonald, Paul Nyquist, David Platt, Phil Ryken, and others, gave spiritually challenging messages based on the theme “Knowing Christ.” Worship was led by Shane and

Awards Presented at Founder’s Week

On Alumni Day, Tuesday, February 5, the Alumna of the Year Award was presented to Mary (Bower ’62) Gunn, who has served the Lord with her husband, Bob ’62, as missionaries with Wycliffe Bible Translators in Columbia and Panama. After 18 years, Mary and her family presented the first Buglere New Testament to believers of Rio Luis, Panama, in 1988. They developed a hymnal recently and continue to serve the church in Panama City.

Senior Richard “Ben” Carr received a $500 scholarship from the Student Council. Ben plans to work in Bible translation, just as the Gunns have.

Shane, Meredith Andrews, Charles ’81 and Donna (Basket ’81) Butler, and Tim Stafford B.A. ’01. Moody’s four student music ensembles also performed.

MBI–Spokane Founder’s Conference

Moody Bible Institute–Spokane held its third annual Founder’s Conference February 24 and 25. Scott M. Gibson, the Haddon W. Robinson professor of Preaching and Ministry at Gordon-Conwell Theological Seminary, spoke during all three sessions. Patrick Ryan Clark, recording artist with Word Records, led music. Students Serve During Spring Break

Nearly 250 students spent spring break ministering to people in the U.S. and abroad on 13 Moody ministry trips. From March 8–24, students served in Florida, Oklahoma, the Czech Republic, England, Ethiopia, Haiti, Utah, the Philippines, and Thailand. Moody’s four music ensembles—Chorale, Men’s Collegiate Choir, Symphonic Band, and Women’s Concert Choir—traveled in various states in the U.S., performing in more than 50 churches.

Students gained cultural and ministry experience as they led worship services, taught vacation Bible school, evangelized youth in juvenile detention centers, sang, performed skits, ran sports clinics, taught English, and more.

Daniel Dunn, the men’s basketball coach, accompanied 20 student athletes to Ethiopia, where they played basketball games, hosted basketball clinics, and visited school classrooms. They answered questions at every stop and shared testimonies. “Through sport, the Ethiopian evangelical church is able to bring people together, develop relationships, and talk to people about Jesus,” he says. “Every other avenue is rebuffed by the orthodox church and by Muslims.”

During her trip to Thailand with 10 other Moody students, Kelly Belcher, a sophomore majoring in applied linguistics, worked with a ministry reaching out to those trapped in prostitution and human trafficking. Kelly says she was impacted most by the nearness of the Lord. “The duration of the trip was very challenging in many ways—physically, emotionally, and spiritually—but He was there, in the midst of it all. His very personal care of us is always astounding and turns our faces to Him in worship.”

Northwest England was the destination for a team of eight students, who led Sunday worship services and worked with youth and adults at Formby Baptist Church. During this year’s trip, the tenth for Moody, Chad Mower, a sophomore majoring in pastoral studies, counseled middle- and high-school students at Berttram Bobb Bible Camp’s spring retreat, and led a service at a Choctaw Indian church. “It was a powerful blessing to see the faithfulness of God through the trip and in the lives of everyone it touched,” Janelle says. “It gives me hope and anticipation to see what God will do with my life as I remain faithful to Him.”

Naomi Sine, a junior children’s ministry major who also traveled to Oklahoma, agrees. “I learned so much about ministry in a rural environment and how the body of Christ is united, no matter how small the church or how varied the people. I was encouraged to see how much believers need each other, especially when we complement each other with our differences!”

Alumni Giving and Scholarships

Giving is vitally important for funding scholarships and endowments at Moody, including educational scholarships for Moody students and travel funds for faculty.

Each year the Alumni Board of Directors chooses three students from the Undergraduate School junior class and two students from Moody Theological Seminary to receive a $1,000 scholarship. The scholarship recipients are determined on the basis of academic achievement, financial need, Christian character, extracurricular activities, and other criteria. The 2013 undergraduate recipients are Chelsea Buchwalter, Donald Faber, and Caleb Watson. The seminary recipients are Shane Deane and Aaron Tubbs.

The Faculty Endowment Travel Fund supports faculty who minister overseas. This year Kyeong-Sook Park ASP ’83 will go to Turkey, Bob MacRae ’75 will go to the Czech Republic, Ian Kerrigan B.S. ’04 will go to Nairobi, Kenya, and possibly Ethiopia, and Kirk Baker ’06 will go to India and Dubai, UAE.

On February 5, Alumni Day of Founder’s Week, Nancy Hastings thanked the 3,869 alumni who gave more than $6 million to Moody in 2012. The Class of ’57 was also praised for their generosity in raising over $64,000 for scholarships to train new generations of students for ministry.

To give a donation, please use the envelope in the center of this magazine. We appreciate your prayers and gifts.
Students enjoy community at MTS–Michigan.

MTS–Michigan offers three graduate degrees and holds many evening classes.

A Look at Moody Theological Seminary–Michigan

Moody Theological Seminary–Michigan is located in Plymouth, Michigan, an inviting community between Ann Arbor and Detroit. About 150 students attend the seminary each year to strengthen their biblical expertise and enrich their skills in ministry leadership. Students can choose from a Master of Divinity, a Master of Theological Studies, or a Master of Arts in Counseling Psychology. Or they can earn a Graduate Certificate in Biblical Studies. Because degree programs are subject to change, look for graduate program updates on Moody’s website at www.moody.edu.

a smaller school,” says Eric Mockaitis, a part-time admissions counselor who will graduate with his M.Div. in December 2013. The strong sense of community is fostered by small class sizes, group projects, outreach events, prayer meetings, and Bible studies. Nine times a semester, the student leadership team prepares hot meals before chapel, creating a regular opportunity for fellowship. Students also enjoy hanging out in the park, grabbing coffee, dining, and shopping in nearby downtown Plymouth.

Expert professors and training

The seven full-time professors at MTS–Michigan hold a total of 30 academic degrees. Dr. J. Brian Tucker, Associate Professor of New Testament, was recently named an Honorary Research Fellow at the School of Theology, Religious Studies and Islamic Studies at the University of Wales Trinity Saint David. The first American to receive this honor, Dr. Tucker will collaborate with the university on research projects, books, and seminars. “This appointment impacts my ministry at MTS-Michigan by allowing me to continue to keep current in the areas in which I teach and to reflect on theology in a more global context,” he says.

MTS professors motivate students with not just knowledge but spiritual zeal. “I try to get our students to think about their spiritual journey and the ways their past can bring a specific missional focus, one that is unique to each of them,” says Dr. Tucker.

Dr. Eric Moore, Assistant Professor and Chair of Pastoral Ministries, agrees. “While teaching in the seminary allows me to stay academically abreast of the latest research and current trends in ministry, my main goal is to impact students’ lives,” says Dr. Moore, who had an article published in the February 2013 online issue of Leadership Journal. Students say he brings a pastor’s heart to his teaching, which they hope to duplicate.

MTS–Michigan is passionate about serving pastors, just like Moody in Chicago is. On May 10, MTS–Michigan held a free daylong conference to equip local church leaders with leadership training, featuring Moody’s 1985 Alumnus of the Year, pastor, author, and speaker Dr. Gene Getz ’52. The pastors also received Logos Bible software training. Moody Bible Institute held its annual re|FOCUS Pastors’ Conference May 20–23.

Students and alumni use their MTS training to serve Christ far and wide. Ministries include counseling in local Michigan clinics, translating the Bible in Papua New Guinea, church planting in St. Vincent in the Caribbean, training pastors in Kenya, ministering in house churches in China, teaching sexual abstinence until marriage in the U.S., as well as serving in many other capacities.

A close-knit student community

“The body of Christ is intimate, and we are very intimate given that we are a smaller school,” says Eric Mockaitis, a part-time admissions counselor who will graduate with his M.Div. in December 2013. The strong sense of community is fostered by small class sizes, group projects, outreach events, prayer meetings, and Bible studies. Nine times a semester, the student leadership team prepares hot meals before chapel, creating a regular opportunity for fellowship. Attendees will explore biblical programming, digital technology, radio production, management, marketing, social media, television, and more. For more information, contact gpt-ghana@theovision.org.
Nyquists’ New Book Discusses Millennial Migration from Church

Why have so many millennials, those born between 1982 and 2000, walked away from the Church, and what can be done about it? Those questions are the subject of The Post-Church Christian, a book written by Moody President Dr. Paul Nyquist and his millennial-age son, Carson.

This book, published by Moody Publishers, provides perspectives from two generations that often come from differing viewpoints. Carson ’10 expresses his generation’s love for Jesus but disillusionment with the evangelical church, citing reasons such as judgmentalism, a lack of Christian liberty, and too little engagement with culture. In his response, Paul Nyquist points out the church’s strong foundation and cautions against a complete departure from the church. With 10,000 baby boomers retiring every day, the church leadership will soon pass to the next generation, he says. Nyquist then presents steps to help both generations move forward together.

Carson concludes the book by urging his generation to use the frustration they’ve experienced in the church as the inspiration for creating a renewed community of faith. He exhorts millennials to lead with creativity, innovation, and passion for Jesus. “We have been hurt, yet we need to get past the self-reflection and lead the church forward in a culture desperate for hope,” he explains.

Both father and son held a panel discussion about the post-church Christian in Torrey-Gray Auditorium on Moody’s Chicago campus on February 6 during Founder’s Week. Other members of the panel included Ben Stewart, Doni Alicea B.A. ’04, Neal Anderson ’05, and Bob MacRae ’75.

The Post-Church Christian is one of several books published by Moody’s millennial generation publishing team. For more information about The Post-Church Christian, please visit www.postchurchchristian.com.

Mark Jobe’s vision to replant a church on Chicago’s southwest side nearly 30 years ago has blossomed from a handful of people to a multi-site congregation of more than 5,000 meeting at 19 campuses with 33 weekend worship services. As lead pastor of what today is New Life Community Church, Mark Jobe B.A. ‘84, M.A. ‘98 developed his passion for urban ministry at Moody, where he had many opportunities to serve alongside peers, professors, and friends of Moody. Working with others has been a key practice that Jobe believes has contributed to the church’s growth. Currently Jobe has 24 pastors on staff, 14 of which are Moody graduates.

“We are incredibly committed to work as a team, and together we believe that we can accomplish extraordinary things for the kingdom of God,” says Jobe, whose entire pastoral team meets weekly to go over the passage they will preach on Sunday. “We function as one church that meets in multiple locations.”

The multi-site model reduces the isolation and lack of support in single churches that can cause some pastors to leave the ministry, he says, and also allows the church to reach multiple cultures and languages. New Life’s vision is to plant about 20 more churches by the end of the current decade. Over the years and generations, there have been 14 last names that have been part of this family through marriages. The story that started with three sisters has produced 23 Moody alums and one current student—28 Moody students in all.

A Legacy of Faithfulness

If you have attended Moody Bible Institute in the last 80 years, there is a good chance you crossed paths with a member of one family with an unbelievable web of alumni. Maurice Peterson graduated from Moody in 1930 and Ione Reed in 1935. Maurice married a woman named Lucille who just happened to be Ione’s sister. There was a third Reed sister, Marcellyn, who was a 1941 graduate. And this is where the story gets interesting. The families of these three sisters have produced 23 Moody alums and one current student—28 Moody students in all.

At Founder’s Week in February of 2013, several members of this family connected for a mini, impromptu reunion. It was unplanned because they didn’t know the others would be in attendance! Ruth Hasenauer ’63, daughter of Maurice and Lucille, tells the story:

“I was there for my 50th reunion and was surprised to find that there were seven other members of my extended family attending the evening service at The Moody Church for Alumni Day! With text messages back and forth, we managed to get together after the service: cousins Margaret and Harold Baker (Moody Stewardship representative), nephew Jim Huhta ’83 and wife Cathy, cousins Nathan ’07 and Tricia (Boyle ’01) McMillan, and cousin Tommy McMillan, who is a present student. We shared together until the church’s lights flashed on and off for us to leave. We discovered there were 28 family members who had attended or were attending Moody.”

At least two members of this extended family have graduated in every decade since the 1930s—that’s eight decades—and at least two more will have graduated by the end of the current decade. Over the years and generations, there have been 14 last names that have been part of this family through marriages. And the legacy doesn’t stop there.

In true Moody fashion, this family has done gospel work. They’ve produced two pastors, two missionary doctors, and two missionary aviators. Twelve others engaged in missions in numerous countries and ministries. Three have gone into Christian education while others have served at Moody.

The story that started with three sisters in the 1930s is one of faithfulness. Foundationally, it is a picture of God’s faithfulness to a family across decades and across the globe. It is also a powerful depiction of familial faithfulness to Jesus. Eighty-three years and 28 students serving the King is an amazing thread to trace. Alongside them, though, is the faithfulness of the ministry of Moody Bible Institute over the years as a place people turn to for biblical truth and training. We are thankful to God for his sustaining hand on this family and this ministry.
Bible Translators in Columbia Relying on God

During a course on exegetical methods, Clay Strom ’77 (Advanced Studies) remembers when one of his professors leaned on the podium to pose a question: “What if God took everything you had, and you had to rely just on Him alone?”

Clay never forgot the question, because he and his wife, Bev (Brander ’72) (B.A. in Missionary Nursing ’77), have faced many dangers over the last 31 years as Wycliffe Bible translators in Columbia, South America. “I wouldn’t trade any of it, because I learned so much about how faithful God is,” Clay says.

The Stroms arrived in a remote Columbian Amazon jungle village accessible only by aircraft or boat in 1982 and began learning the language of the Letuama/Tanimuka people and befriending them. Just three years later, guerrillas came looking to harm the American missionaries. By God’s grace, the Stroms were at the Wycliffe Mission Center in the plains at that time, but their house was burned and the chief urged them not to return. Reluctantly they stayed away for two-and-a-half years.

“At the time we saw it as a catastrophe, but we see how God was in it,” Bev says. The move allowed them to concentrate on producing literacy books in order to launch an education program and distribute scriptural materials in the Letuama/Tanimuka villages.

The Stroms also began recording the translated Word on audio cassette tapes, including a panorama of the Bible with Scripture passages, a salvation message, and songs. The tapes and hand-cranked tape players were distributed in isolated jungle villages beginning in 1989.

In 1994 a colleague, Ray Rising, was kidnapped just outside the center where the Stroms worked. The Stroms’ prayers were raised to God continually until the missionary was released unharmed two years later. However, they grieved when five New Tribes missionaries were killed. Because of ongoing security concerns, the Stroms moved to the Wycliffe Center reestablished in the capital city of Bogota.

“Through that experience, we learned many lessons about surrendering our all to Him who knows all and can do anything. We know that when we feel helpless, He is never helpless,” says Bev. “He is the Almighty God.”

After the last of their three children graduated from high school in 2004, the Stroms moved permanently to Leticia, a Columbian town bordering Brazil and Peru. There they helped develop a Bible training program in 2006 to prepare national missionaries to reach their own people. They also produced Bible-related films and translated and recorded the Old Testament in a paraphrased story style. They are in the final stages of translating a partial New Testament (2013), and will publish a topical Scripture book and school dictionary in 2015.
Caribbean Couple Answers the Call to Missions

They came to America in 2011 with two suitcases each to attend Moody Bible Institute in Chicago, Illinois. Originally from the Dutch Caribbean island of Curaçao, Ed and Luisette Kraal quit their jobs, gave away their furniture and car, and sold their house in response to God’s call to serve in missions. Ed is a missions/pastoral major in the Undergraduate School and Luisette is pursuing a Master of Arts in Spiritual Formation at Moody Theological Seminary.

Ed and Luisette are learning much from their professors. Ed is particularly inspired by his Christian Missions course with Dr. Tim Sisk. “His heart for missions is just wonderful to follow,” he says.

Luisette has grown in her understanding of God’s Word. “Professor Wong Loi Sing’s way of opening the Bible by using hermeneutics is life-changing!” she says.

After coming to Christ as adults, the Kraals listened to Moody Radio online and studied Bibles from Moody Publishers. Over time, the Lord led them to prepare for missionary work. Through a mutual missionary friend, they were connected to Dr. Wong Loi Sing—who came to speak at their church and began guiding them through Moody’s application process.

The Kraals founded Saved to Serve Ministries in Curaçao in 2005, and since then have been serving in the organization, which focuses on evangelism, leadership, and disciple-making. “One of our goals is to emphasize the importance of missions,” says Ed. “After all, American missionaries brought the gospel to us. It is vital that we help pastors and churches understand from God’s Word that the Great Commission is a call to missions.”

After settling in at Moody, Ed and Luisette were able to arrange a trip with Dr. Sisk and other Moody students to serve with Abundance Grace Church in Curaçao. In the summer of 2012, they spent seven weeks evangelizing the local Hindu community and leading training conferences for pastors. They also served the Helping Hands ministry, holding Bible lessons for women and children. The Kraals will return to Curaçao this summer to encourage people who expressed a desire to become missionaries during their previous trip.

After they graduate in the spring of 2014, Ed and Luisette, along with their daughter Johanna, plan to use their training at Moody to plant churches, launch mentoring and discipleship programs, and teach the Bible in Latin countries. They also would like to help organize a mission board in the Caribbean region.

Kelly Cornelisse B.A. ’12 began serving in full-time ministry less than a month after graduating from Moody. She has been the youth director at Moline Christian Reformed Church in Michigan since June 2012. At Moody, through her involvement in ministry and her internship, Kelly was able to gain valuable experience in youth ministry. She served in the youth group at her church, Faith Christian Reformed; her internship was at Peace Reformed Church in Middleville, Michigan. She found it incredibly beneficial to supplement her classroom education with active ministry involvement.

Kelly realized her calling to youth ministry during her first year at Moody. She was not involved in ministry with youth during her first year and missed it greatly. Now she cannot imagine doing anything else.

As a youth director, Kelly finds it most rewarding to watch students come to Christ and grow in their faith. She loves to watch God change their lives. No matter how long her interaction is with her students, and whether or not she sees changes in them, Kelly believes God has brought them together for a reason. She is thankful for the time God gives her with them.

Last January, Kelly started her Master of Theological Studies program at Calvin Theological Seminary in Grand Rapids, Michigan. She believes one can never have too much education when it comes to working with teens. In her opinion, a youth worker’s greatest mistake is underestimating the intelligence of young people. She hopes her master’s degree will help her better serve the teens she is working with.

Jordan Scott Taylor B.A. ’12 works part time at Moody Radio Chicago while pursuing acting. His father was a stage director at his home church, and since childhood, Jordan has been in over 20 productions, allowing him to discover his love for theater at a young age.

His favorite production at Moody was Godspell, a musical performed and produced by Moody’s traveling drama team, Ad Vivum. Godspell is based on the parables found in the Gospel of Matthew. The president of Ad Vivum, Jordan had the pleasure of being in the cast of the show and serving as the show’s director. Ad Vivum performed Godspell during the 2011-2012 school year and toured throughout the Chicago area.

During his time at Moody, Jordan’s perspective on acting completely changed. Through classes, discussions, and performances, he realized that acting is above all an act of worship to offer up to our Creator. He also discovered how theater can be used as a ministry. Theater provokes emotions that are rarely found anywhere else, and it is a venue where believers and nonbelievers can come together to explore ideas, thoughts, feelings, and emotions. This opens the door for dialogue about life’s deeper themes. Theater is also a ministry that can be used around the world. Actors can be found across the globe, as well as people who just love theater. Theater can proclaim the truths of the gospel in cross-cultural ways.

Jordan has found that one of the best things about pursuing theater in Chicago has been the opportunity to meet hundreds of people with a passion for the creative arts. In the near future, he hopes to complete his Equity membership candidacy and join the Actors Equity Association. He would also like to move to New York where he can pursue acting full-time.

When not on stage, Jordan serves at Edgewater Baptist Church as worship leader and works for Moody Radio in Chicago. He has been leading worship at Edgewater for almost two years and finds it incredibly rewarding. At Moody Radio, Jordan works in the promotions department. He often travels to local events and enjoys meeting and talking with the many listeners of Moody Radio.

Jocelyn Amanda Tripp B.A. ’11 was offered a position as a teacher at All Nations Christian Academy, and in September 2011, she moved to Yangpyeong Gun, South Korea, to teach at the school.

In her ESL classes, Josie worked with Korean children and often had the opportunity to share the gospel through teaching and other learning exercises. Outside of school, she built relationships and shared the gospel with neighbors and friends. While in South Korea, Josie attended OEM church.

At the end of her commitment in July 2012, Josie returned to Canada, where she worked as a full-time nanny and a part-time mother’s helper. At her home church, she ran a program for children from divorced families.

In January 2013, Josie began her next big adventure by moving to Denver, Colorado, where she will be pursuing her master’s degree at Denver Seminary.

Jonathan Mason B.S. ’05 “slaps the Word on thick” as the bass player for The Andy Needham Band.

In the lush green yet spiritually arid climate of New England, hope can seem distant. However, forefront Boston worshipers, The Andy Needham Band, are proof that God is still working in that part of the woods. The Andy Needham Band’s calling is to bring a spiritual awakening through their full-time ministry. The band carries a strong rhythm section and a freshly-crafted guitar sound that shows they are as serious about their music as they are about their faith.

Along with playing the bass, Jonathan works as the band’s manager and booking agent and oversees their administration and equipment.

After graduating, Jonathan started working at a small local church while continuing his education through a local seminary extension campus. At the church, he had the joy of leading the music ministry, helping with the men's and youth ministry, and handling other administrative tasks.

In 2007, Jonathan married his wife Hannah, and in 2012 they welcomed their first child, Ayla Grace, into the world.

Jonathan did not have plans to be involved in a full-time traveling band, but the Lord’s plans superseded his own. Soon he had the opportunity to serve the church at large in this new ministry. After much prayer and seeking wise counsel, the Mason family embarked on this adventure. You can get in touch with Jonathan by e-mail or twitter. Cherie (Bradshaw) Wagner B.A. ’05 graduated from Moody with a degree in sports ministry. However, the Lord has led her to serve Him in a different way. After graduation, Cherie quickly found herself involved in women’s ministry at her church in Arizona. In September 2010, she founded her own ministry for women, Neue Thing. Neue Thing exists to teach modern women God’s Word by equipping them to believe it, inspiring them to live it, empowering them to take it, and transforming a new generation through faith in Jesus Christ.

For the past few years, Cherie’s primary focus has been to fulfill the purpose of New Thing’s ministry by leading Bible studies, writing a daily blog, and publishing her very first Bible study, “Found on My Knees.” The six-week study leads women through God’s Word as they journey from brokenness to blessing.

Cherie has also had the opportunity to speak at multiple women’s conferences and retreats, bringing the message of “Found on My Knees” to more and more women. She loves showing women how God delights in His people, even in our brokenness, and how He takes our brokenness and makes something new when we surrender to Him.
